THE FLOATPLANE

Saw this image in Luke's video:

and I knew I was on board with whatever it is you guys were planning.

I'm applying to be your code guru since I've been actively searching for a way to reconcile my passion for multimedia and my passion for code for a while now.

You see, I've been programming for 13 years, and have been involved in multimedia production projects for about 15 years. But always separately.

Helping make an online platform for creators really calls out to me.
Specially taking into account you're looking for an expert fullstack Javascript programmer with Web Transcoding, Agile Development, and Remote Team experience.

I'm a no-bullshit kind of guy who's had a pretty damn good track record of finding no-bullshit people to work with.

Taking into account this is a project with "Linus" written all over it, I'd say it couldn't get more "straight to the point", "get shit done" than that.

Let's collaborate.

Sincerely,
